DR. BEATTY COMES TO OGDEN TO REGISTER A BIG PROTEST; MASKS ARE NO LONGER WORN

The city and county boards of health met with the business men's emergency health committee and the city and county commissioners in the city hall to confer with Dr. Beatty, state secretary of the board of health, yesterday afternoon.

The chair was taken by Mayor Browning.

The occasion of Dr. Beatty's visit was the rigid quarantine which Ogden is attempting to put into force against all cities whose health regulations are not as strict as those of the city, and, in particular, against Salt Lake City whose medical board, acting under orders from the state board, lifted the ban off places of public assembly excepting the public schools and public dancing places, on Sunday and Monday of this week.

Dr. Beatty said that the state board had not succumbed to any kind of "pressure" from business or other interests, but had acted purely on its own initiative after a very careful judgment of the situation, as compared with the experience of great and populous cities of the United States. He had come to the conclusion that when the epidemic descended to a certain level, the ban might in safety be lifted, for, although the epidemic was not actually stamped out, it was highly improbable that it would rise again to the serious dimensions that caused widespread fear weeks before.

"The proposition came to this," said the doctor, "there comes a time when the disease, in its epidemic form is easy to handle. We have reached that condition in Salt Lake. All that is needed now is to enforce the strict quarantine against sick folks and no further danger of a serious return can be expected. If it should come about that new cases begin to multiply rapidly, then we will be in the duty of the board to impose the ban again. I was the best damned man in the state of Utah when we imposed the ban, and I made up my mind that I would be more heatedly damned still on the day that the ban was lifted, and so it had come to be."

Tilt With Johnson.

Dr. Beatty said that he had not come to Ogden to "argue" with members of the conference, about anything that this city had done or might do during the epidemic, although he had his own personal opinions on many matters which were diametrically opposed to those of the authorities in Ogden. He thought Ogden was imposing unnecessarily strict and harmful methods; that they would defeat the very end they were presumed to serve.

Here Superintendent Henry C. Johnson asked Dr. Beatty for the principle which guided the state board in concluding that theaters and other public places were safe, and schools were unsafe. Dr. Beatty declined to argue, saying:

"Mr. Johnson has his own strong conviction that children are safe while they run about and play in groups in school. I have my own strong conviction that they are not safe. He cannot convert me and I cannot convert him, so, in the language of Shakespeare, 'What's the use?'"

Dr. Beatty said that statistics relating to Ogden and Salt Lake proved that Ogden was at least twice as badly off as Salt Lake City and that when Ogden comes down to Salt Lake's ratio of new cases, it will be just as wise to life the ban.

Specially, the state health officer objects, first, to Ogden's quarantine on Salt Lake to Ogden travel; to the quarantine of homes as distinct from the quarantine of sick persons in the homes; to the wearing of masks. On the latter subject he confessed to a change of opinion from three weeks ago. He qualified the latter opinion, saying that he believed the same use of a perfectly clean, well sterilized mask, which is changed every two hours, is a highly commendable form of prevention which those who are in close contact with the public ought to wear. And concerning the vaccine which is being produced at the state laboratories, he held a very high opinion indeed.

Dr. Beatty left the meeting and most of those who attended confessed to a clear doubt as to what purpose he had in mind in visiting Ogden except to register a "kick" against the quarantine affecting travel between the two cities.

Interviewed at the close of Dr. Beatty's conference, John Spargo and Dr. Rowe each stated that they were still clearly of opinion that nothing in the wide world nor on the deep blue sea had caused the lifting of the ban in Salt Lake City but the pressure of business interests more keenly desirous of seeing the small town folks crowd to the capital city and buy their Christmas gifts.

"Ogden will keep going, strictly enforcing its health regulations, except that we shall have to consider whether we will make the wearing of the mask universal or banish its compulsion altogether," said these gentlemen. Each of them had received many complaints that the mask ordinance was working unequally, and poor people were being fined for negligence while others of bigger pockets were not being caught.

At this point in the meeting, a deputation came in from the motormen and conductors of the Utah-Idaho Central Railroad company, stating that the wearing of the mask was for them and impossibility, as they were unable to keep them clean or get them sterilized or changed. They were working long hours, ten, twelve, fourteen, even sixteen hours a day, owing to shortage of help, and the men felt they had a real grievance which the board would wish to relieve. After considerable discussion and the statement by Rowe and Spargo that they were for one of two things, either the universal compulsory wearing of the mask or none at all, and a statement by Dr. McGillicuddy that it was impossible to teach many people common sense methods of wearing the mask, which he holds to be a good measure if properly followed, Commissioner Flygare moved that the regulation be abolished. Commissioner Jones seconded. Dr. Rowe moved an amendment, which John Spargo seconded, that the opinion of ten city doctors be sought and their conclusion followed. The amendment was lost.

and the motion banishing the mask regulation went immediately into effect.

The meeting was relieved of high tension by the choler statement of one of the railroad men that, if the mask regulation was not abolished, the street car conductors would not come to work in the morning. Dr.
Rowe said he objected to Bolsheviki "hold up" methods being used on the board, and it was this statement that caused him to proceed cautiously and move his amendment seeking medical opinion on the matter.

"If the ordinance is a safeguard of the public health, we will stick to it whether we may ride on street cars or not," said the doctor.

With the passing of Commissioner Flygare's motion, the meeting adjourned.

EXPOSE HEARST CABLES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Government copies of telegrams signed by William Randolph Hearst giving instructions regarding the policy of his newspapers and their correspondents during the war were read into the record at today's hearing of the senate committee investigating German propaganda.

In a message to the New York American on February 24, 1917, Mr. Hearst outlined instructions to be cable to William Bayard Hale, then a Hearst correspondent in Berlin and who, according to evidence recently produced, was on the German pay roll without Hearst's knowledge. Mr. Hearst said he believed a vast majority of the people in America and Germany opposed the United States entering the war, and concluded: "We earnestly desire to employ the influence of our country not for the extension and protection of the war but for the promotion of a just and lasting peace."

A message dated March 2, signed "Doctor," and addressed to S. S. Carvalho, New York American, declared that the famous Zimmerman note in which Germany proposed an alliance with Mexico and Japan and which the Associated Press revealed to the world, probably was a forgery prepared by the attorney general.

The object of the "forgery," the message said, "was to frighten congress into giving the president the powers he demanded and perhaps also into passing the espionage bill."

The Hearst message of February 24 follows:

"I firmly believe that the vast majority of the people of the United States are entirely undesirous of war with Germany. I believe also that the people of Germany are equally un-desirous of war with the United States.

"Under such conditions I cannot see why the century-old friendship of the United States and Germany cannot be maintained and perpetuated by the high minded and humanitarian rulers and political leaders of our respective countries.

"We in America have just celebrated the anniversary of Washington's birthday and this should remind us that the friendship of Germany and the United States was inaugurated by Washington and Frederick the Great, two of the ablest and wisest, and most far-seeing statesmen that any nations have possessed in the history of the world.

"May the statesmen of our respective countries today heed the advice and follow the footsteps of these two great leaders of men and builders of nations.

"The course of my newspapers has been fair to Germany not because I am pro-German any more than I am pro-Ally. I am merely patriotically interested in the welfare of my own country and altruistically interested in the progress of the world.

"I am sure that the United States will value in the future the consistent friendship of Germany as it has valued it in the past and I think that most Americans realize that Germany, like France, represents in Europe a political, social and economic progress similar to our own.

"Americans from childhood have been taught to regard both Germany and France as their proven friends.
We, therefore, deeply deplore the war between these great nations which have contributed so much to the pro-
